FOX FUNNIES and CROW CALLS

My father was carving the turkey for our very large family one Sunday night when he caught all us kids eyeing the two drumsticks.

"You know what I ought to do?" he said, brightly. "I ought to cross a turkey with a centipede so there'd be enough drumsticks for everybody."

"And how," my mother asked, with a smile, "would you catch it, dear?"

Georgia Haley, Tucson, Ariz.

Would you believe it if I told you one of my friends confided that he couldn't sleep every night because he kept seeing snakes and elephants? So I asked him if he saw a doctor.

"No," he repeated. "Just snakes and elephants!"

Will McDermott, Clinton, Tex.

"You should've seen the big fish I had on my hook," bragged Tully. "It weighed 12 pounds, but it fell off just before I got it into the boat."

"Oh, yeah?" said Norman. "Then how could you tell how much it weighed?"

"By the scales on its back, of course," snapped Tully with a wise-guy grin.

From spring to the fall,
In a room with a calendar
And a bed, that's all.
No one brought food
To sell or to give,
How did the poor man manage to live?

A.: He drank from the spring in the bed, and ate dates off the calendar!
